Preface

I-1 Introduction

This compendium is an annual printed summary of the data contained in the HIV sequence database. In these compendia we try to present a judicious selection of the data in such a way that it is of maximum utility to HIV researchers. Each of the alignments attempts to display the genetic variability within the different species, groups and subtypes of the virus.

This compendium contains sequences published before January 1, 2009. Hence, though it is called the 2009 Compendium, its contents correspond to the 2008 curated alignments on our website.

The number of sequences in the HIV database is still increasing exponentially. In total, at the time of printing, there were 229,451 sequences in the HIV Sequence Database, an increase of 17% since last year.

The number of near complete genomes (>7000 nucleotides) increased to 2099 by end of 2008, reflecting a smaller increase than in previous years. However, as in previous years, the compendium alignments contain only a small fraction of these. Included in the alignments are a small number of sequences representing each of the subtypes and the more prevalent circulating recombinant forms (CRFs) such as 01 and 02, as well as a few outgroup sequences (group O and N and SIV-CPZ). Of the rarer CRFs we included one representative each. A more complete version of all alignments is available on our website, `http://www.hiv.lanl.gov/content/sequence/NEWALIGN/align.html`

Reprints are available from our website in the form of both HTML and PDF files. As always, we are open to complaints and suggestions for improvement. Inquiries and comments regarding the compendium should be addressed to seq-info@lanl.gov

I-5 About the cover

The cover of this compendium depicts a phylogenetic analysis method to classify sequences into known subtype clades with the Branching Index (BI) (Figure I.1). The purpose of the experiment was to examine variation in BI classification accuracy across known subtypes and over the HIV-1 genome, and thereby to establish threshold BI values for inferring whether a sequence belongs to a known subtype clade. The x-axis of each panel depicts position along the HIV-1 genome. The y-axis is the BI, which varies from 0 (complete divergence from other members of the subtype clade) to 1 (no divergence from a known subtype clade, relative to other clades). Each panel depicts a known subtype and results from computing the BI for many sequences of that subtype. Thus, the figure depicts a quantification of BI classification accuracy for HIV-1 subtypes. This analysis complements results from the LANL HIV Database PhyloPlace tool by establishing BI error rates and confidence levels for subtype inference.

We sampled 10,000 random-length fragments over the 2005 HIV-1 M-group subtype reference alignment, and randomly chose a query sequence for each. We computed the BI twice for each fragment sampled, once with all sequences included (thus generating the data points used to draw the upper curve, colored by subtype and represented by + symbols) and once with a subset of sequences that excluded the subtype of the query sequence (generating the data points used to draw the lower curve, colored by grayscale and represented by ∘ symbols). This second scenario emulates conditions where the query sequence is from an unknown subtype. The figure depicts the BI from each fragment as a pair of points. Both the midpoint (+ or ∘) and the extent of each fragment are shown. Vertical lines connect paired observations when one is misclassified. We fit smooth curves to the resulting data with loess locally weighted regression. Horizontal lines depict the optimal thresholds for inferring that a sequence is of known subtype with greatest accuracy, either among all subtypes (black) or per subtype (gray). Sequences yielding BI values above 0.66 are significantly associated with the subtype, with 93.5% confidence. For more information about BI, see Wilbe et al. 2003 (Virology 316:116–125). For additional information about the generation of these curves and their use in classifying HIV-1 sequences, see Hraber et al. 2008 (J. Gen. Virol. 89:2098–2107).

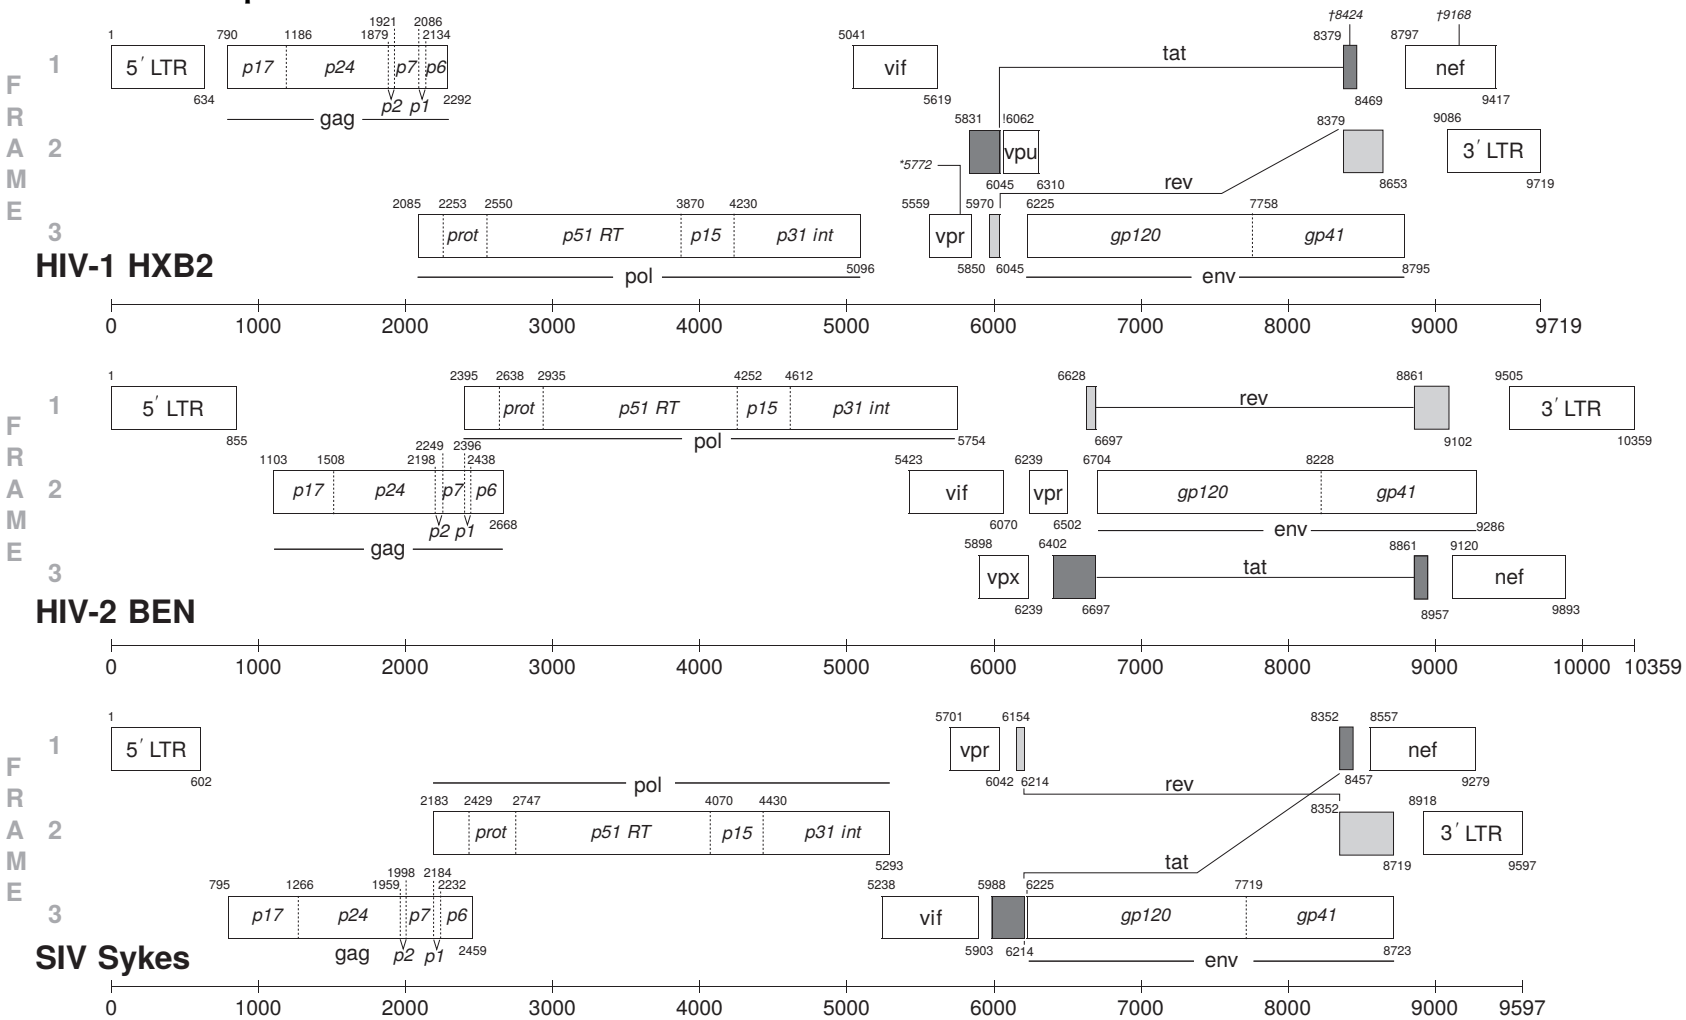
I-6 Genome maps



Landmarks of the HIV-1, HIV-2, and SIV genomes. Open reading frames are shown as rectangles. The gene start, indicated by the small number in the upper left corner of each rectangle normally records the position of the `a` in the `atg` start codon for that gene, while the number in the lower right records the last position of the stop codon. For pol, the start is taken to be the first `t` in the sequence `ttttttag`, which forms part of the stem loop that potentiates ribosomal slippage on the RNA and a resulting −1 frameshift and the translation of the Gag-Pol polyprotein. The tat and rev spliced exons are shown as shaded rectangles. In HXB2, *5772 marks the position of a frameshift in the vpr gene caused by an "extra" `t` relative to most other subtype B viruses; !6062 indicates a defective `acg` start codon in vpu; †8424 and †9168 mark premature stop codons in tat and nef. See Korber et al., Numbering Positions in HIV Relative to HXB2CG, in Human Retroviruses and AIDS, 1998, p. 102. Available from `http://www.hiv.lanl.gov/content/sequence/HIV/REVIEWS/HXB2.html`

I-8 Landmarks of the genome

HIV genomic structural elements

LTR Long terminal repeat, the DNA sequence flanking the genome of integrated proviruses. It contains important regulatory regions, especially those for transcription initiation and polyadenylation.

TAR Target sequence for viral transactivation, the binding site for Tat protein and for cellular proteins; consists of approximately the first 45 nucleotides of the viral mRNAs in HIV-1 (or the first 100 nucleotides in HIV-2 and SIV.) TAR RNA forms a hairpin stem-loop structure with a side bulge; the bulge is necessary for Tat binding and function.

RRE Rev responsive element, an RNA element encoded within the env region of HIV-1. It consists of approximately 200 nucleotides (positions 7327 to 7530 from the start of transcription in HIV-1, spanning the border of gp120 and gp41). The RRE is necessary for Rev function; it contains a high affinity site for Rev; in all, approximately seven binding sites for Rev exist within the RRE RNA. Other lentiviruses (HIV-2, SIV, visna, CAEV) have similar RRE elements in similar locations within env, while HTLVs have an analogous RNA element (RXRE) serving the same purpose within their LTR; RRE is the binding site for Rev protein, while RXRE is the binding site for Rex protein. RRE (and RXRE) form complex secondary structures, necessary for specific protein binding.

PE Psi elements, a set of 4 stem-loop structures preceding and overlapping the Gag start codon which are the sites recognized by the cysteine histidine box, a conserved motif with the canonical sequence CysX2CysX4HisX4Cys, present in the Gag p7 MC protein. The Psi Elements are present in unspliced genomic transcripts but absent from spliced viral mRNAs.

SLIP An TTTTTT slippery site, followed by a stem-loop structure, is responsible for regulating the -1 ribosomal frameshift out of the Gag reading frame into the Pol reading frame.

CRS Cis-acting repressive sequences postulated to inhibit structural protein expression in the absence of Rev. One such site was mapped within the pol region of HIV-1. The exact function has not been defined; splice sites have been postulated to act as CRS sequences.

INS Inhibitory/Instability RNA sequences found within the structural genes of HIV-1 and of other complex retroviruses. Multiple INS elements exist within the genome and can act independently; one of the best characterized elements spans nucleotides 414 to 631 in the gag region of HIV-1. The INS elements have been defined by functional assays as elements that inhibit expression posttranscriptionally. Mutation of the RNA elements was shown to lead to INS inactivation and up regulation of gene expression.

Genes and gene products

GAG The genomic region encoding the capsid proteins (group specific antigens). The precursor is the p55 myristylated protein, which is processed to p17 (MAtrix), p24 (CApsid), p7 (NucleoCapsid), and p6 proteins, by the viral protease. Gag associates with the plasma membrane where the virus assembly takes place. The 55 kDa Gag precursor is called assemblin to indicate its role in viral assembly.

POL The genomic region encoding the viral enzymes protease, reverse transcriptase, RNAse, and integrase. These enzymes are produced as a Gag-Pol precursor polyprotein, which is processed by the viral protease; the Gag-Pol precursor is produced by ribosome frameshifting near the 3′end of gag.

ENV Viral glycoproteins produced as a precursor (gp160) which is processed to give a noncovalent complex of the external glycoprotein gp120 and the transmembrane glycoprotein gp41. The mature gp120-gp41 proteins are bound by non-covalent interactions and are associated as a trimer on the cell surface. A substantial amount of gp120 can be found released in the medium. gp120 contains the binding site for the CD4 receptor, and the seven transmembrane domain chemokine receptors that serve as co-receptors for HIV-1.

TAT Transactivator of HIV gene expression. One of two essential viral regulatory factors (Tat and Rev) for HIV gene expression. Two forms are known, Tat-1 exon (minor form) of 72 amino acids and Tat-2 exon (major form) of 86 amino acids. Low levels of both proteins are found in persistently infected cells. Tat has been localized primarily in the nucleolus/nucleus by immunofluorescence. It acts by binding to the TAR RNA element and activating transcription initiation and elongation from the LTR promoter, preventing the 5′LTR AATAAA polyadenylation signal from causing premature termination of transcription and polyadenylation. It is the first eukaryotic transcription factor known to interact with RNA rather than DNA and may have similarities with prokaryotic anti-termination factors. Extracellular Tat can be found and can be taken up by cells in culture.

REV The second necessary regulatory factor for HIV expression. A 19 kDa phosphoprotein, localized primarily in the nucleolus/nucleus, Rev acts by binding to RRE and promoting the nuclear export, stabilization and utilization of the unspliced viral mRNAs containing RRE. Rev is considered the most functionally conserved regulatory protein of lentiviruses. Rev cycles rapidly between the nucleus and the cytoplasm.

VIF Viral infectivity factor, a basic protein of typically 23 kDa. Promotes the infectivity but not the production of viral particles. In the absence of Vif the produced viral particles are defective, while the cell-to-cell transmission of virus is not affected significantly. Found in almost all lentiviruses, Vif is a cytoplasmic protein, existing in both a soluble cytosolic form and a membrane-associated form. The latter form of Vif is a peripheral membrane protein that is tightly associated with the cytoplasmic side of cellular membranes. In 2003, it was discovered that Vif prevents the action of the cellular APOBEC-3G protein which deaminates DNA:RNA heteroduplexes in the cytoplasm.

VPR Vpr (viral protein R) is a 96-amino acid (14 kDa) protein, which is incorporated into the virion. It interacts with the p6 Gag part of the Pr55 Gag precursor. Vpr detected in the cell is localized to the nucleus. Proposed functions for Vpr include the targeting the nuclear import of preintegration complexes, cell growth arrest, transactivation of cellular genes, and induction of cellular differentiation. In HIV-2, SIV-SMM, SIV-RCM, SIV-MND-2 and SIV-DRL the Vpx gene is apparently the result of a Vpr gene duplication event, possibly by recombination.

VPU Vpu (viral protein U) is unique to HIV-1, SIVcpz (the closest SIV relative of HIV-1), SIV-GSN, SIV-MUS, SIV-MON and SIV-DEN. There is no similar gene in HIV-2, SIV-SMM or other SIVs. Vpu is a 16 kDa (81-amino acid) type I integral membrane protein with at least two different biological functions: (a) degradation of CD4 in the endoplasmic reticulum, and (b) enhancement of virion release from the plasma membrane of HIV-1-infected cells. Env and Vpu are expressed from a bicistronic mRNA. Vpu probably possesses an N-terminal hydrophobic membrane anchor and a hydrophilic moiety. It is phosphorylated by casein kinase II at positions Ser52 and Ser56. Vpu is involved in Env maturation and is not found in the virion. Vpu has been found to increase susceptibility of HIV-1 infected cells to Fas killing.

NEF A multifunctional 27-kDa myristylated protein produced by an ORF located at the 3′end of the primate lentiviruses. Other forms of Nef are known, including nonmyristylated variants. Nef is predominantly cytoplasmic and associated with the plasma membrane via the myristyl residue linked to the conserved second amino acid (Gly). Nef has also been identified in the nucleus and found associated with the cytoskeleton in some experiments. One of the first HIV proteins to be produced in infected cells, it is the most immunogenic of the accessory proteins. The nef genes of HIV and SIV are dispensable in vitro, but are essential for efficient viral spread and disease progression in vivo. Nef is necessary for the maintenance of high virus loads and for the development of AIDS in macaques, and viruses with defective Nef have been detected in some HIV-1 infected long term survivors. Nef downregulates CD4, the primary viral receptor, and MHC class I molecules, and these functions map to different parts of the protein. Nef interacts with components of host cell signal transduction and clathrin-dependent protein sorting pathways. It increases viral infectivity. Nef contains PxxP motifs that bind to SH3 domains of a subset of Src kinases and are required for the enhanced growth of HIV but not for the downregulation of CD4.

VPX A virion protein of 12 kDa found in HIV-2, SIV-SMM, SIV-RCM, SIV-MND-2 and SIV-DRL and not in HIV-1 or other SIVs. This accessory gene is a homolog of HIV-1 vpr, and viruses with Vpx carry both vpr and vpx. Vpx function in relation to Vpr is not fully elucidated; both are incorporated into virions at levels comparable to Gag proteins through interactions with Gag p6. Vpx is necessary for efficient replication of SIV-SMM in PBMCs. Progression to AIDS and death in SIV-infected animals can occur in the absence of Vpr or Vpx. Double mutant virus lacking both vpr and vpx was attenuated, whereas the single mutants were not, suggesting a redundancy in the function of Vpr and Vpx related to virus pathogenicity.

Structural proteins/viral enzymes The products of gag, pol, and env genes, which are essential components of the retroviral particle.

Regulatory proteins Tat and Rev proteins of HIV/SIV and Tax and Rex proteins of HTLVs. They modulate transcriptional and posttranscriptional steps of virus gene expression and are essential for virus propagation.

Accessory or auxiliary proteins Additional virion and non-virion-associated proteins produced by HIV/SIV retroviruses: Vif, Vpr, Vpu, Vpx, Nef. Although the accessory proteins are in general not necessary for viral propagation in tissue culture, they have been conserved in the different isolates; this conservation and experimental observations suggest that their role in vivo is very important. Their functional importance continues to be elucidated.

Complex retroviruses Retroviruses regulating their expression via viral factors and expressing additional proteins (regulatory and accessory) essential for their life cycle.

II-1 Introduction

The goal in selecting the sequences to present in the published compendium alignment is to display a set of sequences that represent the genetic variation of HIV-1 worldwide. Selections are made based on the list of identified subtypes and CRFs together with information from phylogenetic trees. Some effort was also put into representing a diversity of geographic locations and sampling times for each subtype, with an emphasis on more recent samples. We include more sequences from the more prevalent subtypes, only one representative for each CRF (except for the widespread CRFs 01 and 02), and group N, group O, and CPZ sequences. Within the limited space of the compendium, this selection is intended to show the worldwide variation of HIV-1 subtypes and CRFs. For URFs, of which there is a growing number, this alignment contains none. The web-based version of this alignment contains all URFs and many additional representatives of most subtypes and CRFs.

As always, the HXB2 sequence is the master sequence in this alignment. This is also the HIV Database genome coordinate standard sequence. The alignment was generated by an iterative process between automated alignment using HMMER and manual editing using BioEdit and Se-Al. As in previous years, the alignment presented is not suggested to be optimal, with the absolute minimum number of gaps and mismatches. It is a compromise between optimal alignment, readability, and an attempt to keep insertions and deletions from altering the protein reading frame presentation. Most gaps have been introduced in multiples of 3 bases to maintain open reading frames when translated directly from the alignment.

At the bottom of the alignment, the translated HXB2 protein sequence is shown. The HIV genome has many overlapping coding regions, and all are shown. For more complete annotation of functional domains, see the protein sequence alignments in Chapter V.
